

WOMAN SMILES WITH JOY OVER KILLING A MAN

Says He Asked Her to Rob Her Husband and Elope.

SLAIN ASKING A KISS.

Mrs. Amore Tells How She Got Big Gun Ready For Her Answer.

Mrs. Josephine Amore, the comely young wife of Carmine Amore, a well-to-do contractor of No. 16 Drift street, Newark, confessed before Judge Horvath that she had shot and killed Michael Mortello, forty years old, in the hallway of her home.

She slew him when he demanded a kiss, she said with a cheerful smile, and was glad of the crime.

"He bothered the life out of me to elope with him," declared the young woman, "and threatened to kill me if I refused. He, a father of five children, would have deserted them all and had me desert mine. He insisted that I get $500 from my husband and then, with all my jewelry, go away with him."

"Got a Great Big Gun."

"But he did not scare me. I got me a great big gun and hid it. Mortello came after me last night when my husband was out. He lived across the hall from me. He said I must kiss him, so I got my revolver and killed him. That is all. He is dead. I am glad. My husband is innocent. He was not at home."

Following the shooting the police placed Carmine Amore, the woman's husband, under arrest, but he denied knowing anything of the shooting. He said he had been across the street in a saloon and did not return until after the affair, when he went to bed. He was found there by the officers who went to the home one time later. In his trousers pocket, however, the police found five .38-caliber cartridges and one empty shell. In a drawer of a bureau close by an empty revolver was found. This revolver apparently had recently been used, and so the officers placed Amore under arrest.

Later on Mrs. Amore confessed that she killed the man. She seemed not to realize the enormity of her crime to-day when arraigned in court, and as she was being led away her face wore a smile. Her husband was released and went back to the Drift street house to look after their two children, but he is being watched.

Dead Man's Wife Talks.

Mrs. Mortello, the wife of the dead man, said that Amore had been jealous of her husband, and seemed to think that he was supplanting him in the affections of Mrs. Amore. She said her husband had told her that he had seen Amore skulking in the hallway and was afraid. He left their apartments last night to go to a porch in the rear of the second story, and it was while he was returning along the hallway that he was killed.

The police say the course of the bullet would indicate that Mortello had been shot while walking in the hallway. It struck the victim in the right side and passed through his body, in a slightly downward direction, from right to left, which would indicate that the man had his right side toward the wielder of the revolver. Had he been walking along the hallway he would have had his right side toward the Amore apartments. The bullet passed through the man's body and as he was being led from the door, it dropped from under his vest.

Mrs. Amore was taken from the police court in the jail in a coach accompanied by two officers, and her brother Dominick Valentino, a wealthy Italian of this city.

The police in going through the effects of Mrs. Amore found two letters, one of which was addressed to her husband and the other to her brother, Dominick Valentino. In these letters the woman wrote that Mortello had been trying to induce her to run away with him, that he had threatened her life and that he had warned her that if she did not get $500 by Aug. 15 and be prepared then to elope with him, he would kill her.

Her idea in writing the letters, the woman wrote, was to let her brother know what happened to her and what she had done.

HOODOO AT WORK ON NOMINEE FOR VICE PRESIDENT

John Temple Graves Follows Sherman and Kern in Attack of Illness.

Is there a hoodoo connected with the nomination for the Vice-Presidency?

This question is prompted by the report that John Temple Graves, the latest Vice-Presidential candidate, is in a private hospital rehearsing for an operation. The operation, his friends say, will be slight, but it will keep Mr. Graves incommunicado for ten days.

James Schoolcraft Sherman, the Republican nominee, felt the weight of the hoodoo—if it is a hoodoo—before his nomination. He was taken sick at Cleveland and for a couple of days his life was in danger. Mr. Sherman was apparently in excellent health in Chicago up to the day he was nominated. He complained of feeling tired that afternoon and grew steadily worse until he was compelled to undergo medical treatment in Cleveland. Even now he is not well and is confronted by the necessity of an ultimate operation.

Candidate Kern, of the Democracy, was not feeling quite fit during the Denver convention. He didn't know it, but undoubtedly the hoodoo was working on him. Although he went to Lincoln from Denver and visited Bryan and did quite a lot of traveling before he got back to Indiana, he was a sick man. He is said to be suffering from a general breakdown.

As for Mr. Graves, he, following the example of his opponents, became ill while the nomination for the Vice-Presidency was young to him. He struggled along for a few days, trying to fight down the pain and sickness by will power, but the hoodoo has gripped him.

Begins to look as though there would have to be a hospital annex to the White House, no matter which set of candidates is elected.

BUTCHERED BOY'S CLOTHING IDENTIFIED BY MOTHER.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Minnie Sullivan, mother of little Shamus Sullivan, who has been missing since Monday night, today identified part of the clothing of the Mud Lake victim as that of her son.

Mrs. Sullivan faintly when she saw the shirt which was found with the body. After regaining consciousness she declared that there could be no mistake in the identification, as she had made the garment herself.

The hacked and severed limbs of the boy were found in a shallow hole in the mud and a half from that place under a bridge and the head was fished out of the drainage canal a considerable distance below the bridge to-day. The police believe that the murder was the work of patrons attacked in the restaurant of Greek "boy" cases.

An arrest was made to-day, that of a Greek known as an importer of bootleg goods. The police refused to divulge the name of their prisoner until further investigation had been made.

WITNESS TELLS GOULD SCANDAL TO GRAND JURY

Miss MacCausland Repeats Her Charge of Attempt to Bribe Her.

The Grand Jury began hearing evidence to-day in the cases of Mrs. Ben Teal, Miss Julia Fleming and Charles A. Mousley, the private detective charged with subordination of perjury in connection with the suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Frank Gould.

Miss Mabel MacCausland, through whose testimony of the alleged attempt to secure false evidence connecting Mr. Gould's name with the case of Miss Bessie de Voe, an actress, the affair was brought to light, told the same story to the Grand Jury that she told in the hearing before Magistrate Corrigan.

Miss Blanche Hale, the hair-dresser, and Miss Marie Falk, the modiste, also testified.

Mr. Hart said he did not expect indictments to be filed until to-morrow. Miss Fleming has remained in the Tombs, but her attorney, Edward Carpel, went before Judge Crane, in General Sessions, to-day, and asked that the amount of bail be reduced from $5,000 to $2,000. There was no objection from the District Attorney and the motion was granted. It is expected that Miss Fleming will secure bail to-day.

MAKING BET RECORD IS NOT CRIME UNLESS DONE AS PROFESSION.

from time to time by a few among us who delight in meddling with the conduct of others, or to levy blackmail.

"The community sheds them as a snake sheds its skin."

"All that the last Legislature did in respect to the gambling laws was to make them apply inside of a race track the same as on the outside. It in no other way extended or added to the said law."

"As to the writing of a memorandum of a bet on a card by the relator, it is enough to say that Section No. 351 of the Penal Code is confined in plain terms to the case of persons who engage in the recording or registering of the bets of all comers as a practice or business."

"That is common gambling, or aiding and abetting common gambling, when the law does not tolerate. The difference between it and ordinary betting is too plain to call for words."

"An ordinary bet is not a crime, whether made in your parlor or on golf links or a race track; nor in the making of a note or memorandum thereof, but if you hold yourself out to bet and bet with all comers or generally become the general recorder of such bets between others, you are guilty of a crime. The relator is discharged."

Sterling's arrest was the result of an arrangement with the Sheriff, who had a deputy on hand when the bet was made. It was intended to make a test case of the arrest. It was believed that Justice Gaynor would give a liberal interpretation of the law.

BABY SHOTS SISTER AS HE PLAYS WITH GUN

Jimmie Elliot Takes Weapon From Shelf and Bullet Wounds Edna.

Pretty little seven-year-old Edna Elliot is lying in St. John's Hospital, shot through the head by her baby brother, James, two and a half years old.

"The police could do no more than make an investigation, for it was an accidental discharge of a .32-caliber revolver in the hands of little James that sent the bullet crashing through Edna's head over the left eye."

Of course, even the police could not think of arresting James, so he was left in the arms of his bereaved mother, at their home, No. 7 Third street, Woodside, just outside of Long Island City.

There is little hope that Edna will live, but the surgeons at the hospital are working desperately, but kindly, to remove the leaden missile, and say if they succeed there will be a chance of the little girl surviving.

Last night, while the parents of Edna and James were in a lower room of the Elliot house, the children clambered out of bed, and in their nightgowns played about their sleeping room. James clambered upon a chair while Edna was dressing her doll. From the chair James was able to survey the mantelpiece, upon which was his father's loaded revolver. The youngster grabbed the weapon and a minute later it exploded. Edna fell back amidst the doll's finery as a tiny stream of blood appeared over her forehead.

The "bang" of the exploding weapon knocked little James to the carpet, and his parents, who were in the room upon hearing the explosion, found the children prostrate. The parents at first thought both children were shot.

James was uninjured. Edna was hurt, but Mr. Elliot said to-day that he kept the revolver loaded for protection from burglars and had only a few minutes before James found it removed the weapon from a high shelf.
